Delaware County Council Unanimously Passes Ordinance Amending Hotel Tax

At Wednesday evening's meeting, Delaware County Council unanimously passed an ordinance enhancing the County's Hotel Tax after a presentation from Visit Delco about the impacts of the tax. This comes ahead of a year where Delaware County is expected to see an increase in visitors thanks to a variety of local sporting events and United States 250th birthday celebrations.

The tax, which will be paid by visitors rather than Delaware County residents, will increase from 3% to 5% effective April 1. This will nearly double the revenue generated from the tax, providing an additional $3 million to Visit Delco annually and putting Delaware County on par with neighboring counties.

Since 1985, overnight visitors to Delaware County lodging at hotels have paid a Hotel Tax. By state law, counties are able to tax up to 5%, and revenue from the tax goes solely to support the activities of Visit Delco as the County's designated Tourism Promotion Agency.

"This is a tool in the toolbox that we need to use," said Council member Joanne Phillips. "This will bring economic help to the county. It will create jobs, it will create business, and it's economically smart."

Representatives from Visit Delco outlined the economic impact of visitors to Delaware County in their presentation before the vote. In 2024, 4.5 million people visited Delco, spending $840 million and creating 13,000 jobs, leading to an economic impact of $1.2 billion and $68 million dollars of local taxes collected which were reinvested into the community to improve the lives of Delco residents. In 2025, the County saw growth across the board in hotel occupancy, revenue, and rooms sold, with Delco seeing the largest growth in rooms sold across all Philadelphia area counties.

In 2026, these numbers are expected to grow considerably with the PGA Championship coming to Newtown Square, FIFA World Cup matches being played in South Philadelphia, a high-profile international soccer team using the Philadelphia Union facilities in Chester as their World Cup base camp, the MLB All-Star Game, America250 celebrations, and more.

“This has been a long time coming,” Council member Elaine Paul Schaefer said. “We’ve spent the last few years talking about the need to raise this to 5%. With increased investment, we will get more for our hoteliers and we will have more economic activity coming in.”

Visit Delco also explained the challenges they’ve faced after the pandemic with the decrease in business travelers and how they’ve gotten creative in attracting people to the county. Among other things, they have been advertising digitally in countries that will be playing in Philadelphia during the World Cup encouraging fans to stay in Delco, partnering with groups hosting events in the area like the Donegal Festival in Springfield in March, and providing Main Street Grants to municipalities holding events that attract visitors.

Sign up for Delco Alert and Ensure you are Prepared for the Winter Storm Fern

With forecasts calling for the potential of more than a foot of snow and significant ice accumulations, Delaware County encourages residents to take steps now to prepare for a significant winter storm, including signing up for Delco Alert.

Delco Alert is Delaware County's free emergency notification system that keeps our communities informed, prepared, and safe. Delco Alert delivers essential messages straight to residents' phones, emails, or landlines. These include Code Blue alerts that trigger the County's Cold Plan, storm and flood warnings, road closures, health advisories, and municipal service changes.

It is one of the most effective ways for County and local officials to communicate during emergencies and disruptions.

Many municipalities now use the platform to issue their own community alerts, and that number continues to rise. The system is available at no cost to all 49 municipalities in the County, and it's already being used to share everything from weather warnings and vaccine events to street paving notices and trash delays.

You can choose what types of alerts you'd like to receive, how you'd like to receive them (text, call, or email), and you can register multiple locations, such as your home, your workplace, or a family member's address.

To sign up, visit delcopa.gov/delcoalert.

Before the storm starts this weekend, ensure that you have enough food, drinking water, medications, and other essentials to last several days in case travel becomes difficult. Stock up on batteries, flashlights, and a portable phone charger in the event of a power outage. To check outage information, please visit PECO's outage map.

Avoid unnecessary travel during the storm, especially during peak snowfall (projected to be Sunday). If you must drive, keep an emergency kit in your vehicle that includes a blanket, extra clothing, snacks, water, a flashlight, and a shovel. Drive slowly, increase following distance, and be alert for snowplows and emergency vehicles.

If it's safe to do so, check in on neighbors to make sure they have heat, food, and any assistance they may need. Severe weather can be challenging for older adults, people with disabilities, and those living alone.

Please check the official County website delcopa.gov and social media channels for countywide updates. Visit local municipality websites and social media channels for specific updates.

Delaware County Honors Legacy of Dr. Martin Luther King with 4th Annual Day of Service in Chester

On Monday, members of Delaware County Council and the Delaware County community came together to celebrate the legacy of Martin Luther King Jr. at the 4th Annual MLK Day of Service in Chester.

The event built upon the 2026 theme “Reclaiming the Dream – Truth, Justice, and Community” to honor Dr. King’s enduring principles of equality and compassion. The Day of Service featured a variety of events designed to inspire and engage the community, emphasizing well-being, volunteerism, and unity. These activities were designed to fulfill Dr. King’s legacy by addressing current social issues, fostering inclusivity, and promoting a culture of peace and understanding.

“Days like Monday are the ones that Dr. King called for and fought for,” said Delaware County Council Chair Richard Womack. “With a shared purpose grounded in love, justice, and the belief a better future for all, Dr. King envisioned communities that break down barriers, build bridges of understanding, and stand united in the face of challenges.”

The day began with an opening ceremony at Chester City Hall, which was followed by a Peace March from City Hall to Widener University. At Widener, participants worked on community beautification and community building activities that appealed to all ages. After lunch and remarks from local officials, the Cultural Arts and Technology Center and America250PADelco organized community building and art activities. These included a film and activity about the impacts of segregation, the creation of an “I Belong, We Belong” banner, a station with MLK historical pins, and much more.

Finally, participants headed over to the Schwartz Athletic Center on the Widener campus for the Hoops for Hunger basketball game between Widener students and Chester community members, which collected donations to benefit local food pantries. In a tightly contested game, Chester came out on top.

Throughout the day, attendees also reflected on the time Dr. King spent in Delaware County as a young man. Dr. King studied at Crozer Theological Seminary in Upland, graduating in 1951. At Crozer he was elected President of the student body while spending time preaching at Calvary Baptist Church in Chester. Although he only spent a few years in Delaware County, it served as an important stop on his journey to becoming the civil rights icon he's known as today.

Activities like the ones on Monday fostered unity, addressed social issues, and inspired us all to continue the work of building a more inclusive and compassionate Delaware County. It served as a reminder of the importance of continuing to carry out Dr. King's vision of service as a tool for change and illustrates the relevancy of his legacy.

Delaware County thanks the partners who made the MLK Day of Service such a success for the fourth year in a row, including Widener University, the Philadelphia Union, the City of Chester, America250PADelco, the Cultural Arts and Technology Center, Making a Change, the Delaware County Heritage Commission, and the MLK Commemorative Committee of Chester and Vicinity.

Delaware County Emergency Services Reflects on Building Readiness Together

Emergency management is often associated with response, but much of the work that keeps communities safe happens well before an incident occurs. In 2025, Delaware County's Emergency Management (EM) team focused on planning, training, and coordination, working closely with municipalities, agencies, and community partners to strengthen countywide readiness and recovery.

A major milestone was the development of Health System Support Emergency Operations Center (EOC) and community recovery coordination. This effort established a structured framework built around nine dedicated workgroups: Public Information, Administration, Workforce Re-Employment, Healthcare Facility Support, Healthcare Sustainability, Emergency Communications, Emergency Operations, Emergency Medical Services, and Health and Human Services. Together, these workgroups provide a coordinated approach to healthcare system stabilization and recovery, with continued collaboration across public, private, and nonprofit partners.

Training and exercises remained a core focus throughout the year. The EM team facilitated countywide planning sessions and exercises addressing real-world risks and community priorities, including safe schools, senior living facilities, hazardous materials preparedness, water rescue coordination, and Emergency Operations Center functions. These activities emphasized decision-making, coordination, and communication, ensuring partners are prepared before emergencies occur.

Municipal Emergency Management Coordinators (EMCs) played a central role in this work. The County's EM program is intentionally built around municipal needs, recognizing that local governments are on the front lines of emergency response and recovery. Through increased municipal participation in EOC operations, planning efforts, and training opportunities, the County works to ensure EMCs are supported, informed, and positioned for success in the communities they serve.

Technology and public communication capabilities also advanced in 2025. Enhancements to WebEOC improved information-sharing among agencies, while expanded participation in Delco Alert strengthened the County's ability to deliver timely public notifications. Residents are encouraged to sign up for emergency alerts at delcopa.gov/delcoalert to stay informed about weather, safety messages, and community impacts.

Looking ahead, 2025 set the foundation for coordinated planning around major 2026 events. Municipalities are working with DES on upcoming events to support early resource coordination and preparedness. This includes planning for events that will bring national attention to Delaware County, such as the PGA Championship, America250 celebrations, and FIFA World Cup-related activities.

Through collaboration, planning, and shared responsibility, Delaware County's Emergency Management team continues working to build a more resilient county—for those who live, work, and play here.
