America250PA Delco Shares Plans to Celebrate America's 250th Birthday Throughout the County

At Wednesday evening's Delaware County Council Meeting, America250PA Delco Director Andrea Silva gave a presentation about the events, initiatives, and programs the organization has this year to celebrate America's 250th birthday and honor Delaware County's critical role in US history.

Silva gave a summary of how America250PA Delco, a nonpartisan initiative to engage all Delaware County residents on America's 250th anniversary, has involved local, statewide, and national groups to celebrate Delco history.

"We in Delaware County have so many cool historic sites and stories," said Delaware County Council member Elaine Paul Schaefer. "In the past we haven't been great about getting out there and promoting it but the America250PA Delco Commission has done such a great job of elevating what we have to offer in Delaware County. I hope everyone gets involved this year."

Council member Schaefer was also appointed to the America250PA Delco Commission at Wednesday's meeting.

Among the events and programs that America250PA Delco has held already, Silva mentioned the Keystone Classroom Initiative, Bells Across PA, and the unveiling of the commemorative banner series at the Media Courthouse as some of the most meaningful.

The Keystone Classroom Initiative involved volunteers and historical re-enactors visiting local elementary schools to teach students about Pennsylvania history and distribute PA history-themed goodies. Volunteers visited Park Lane Elementary in Darby Borough, Bethel Springs Elementary in Bethel Township, and Concord Springs and Garnet Valley Elementary in Concord Township, where they read “K is for Keystone” and discussed the importance of Pennsylvania in American history.

Delaware County had two bells installed as part of the statewide Bells Across PA initiative, which is installing 108 bells across the Commonwealth. The first bell was unveiled at the Drexeline Shopping Center in Drexel Hill in October and designed by Joshua Ruggeri. The second was revealed as part of the opening ceremony for the Delaware County Festival of Lights at Rose Tree Park in Upper Providence Township in December and designed by Tucker Rodkey and students from Legacy Arts Chester.

In September, America250PA Delco partnered with the Media Arts Council to unveil five commemorative banners in front of the Delaware County Courthouse as part of their Delaware County birthday celebrations. The banners, which will be displayed through December 2026, each honor a transformative moment or figure that helped shape American history and their connection to Delaware County.

- “The Nation Makers” commemorates the 1777 Battle of Brandywine, which happened in modern day Chadds Ford.
- Thomas Garrett, an Upper Darby quaker who was an Underground Railroad station master, assisted more than 2,700 people escaping slavery.
- Dr. Anna Howard Shaw, a Rose Valley resident who served as the president of the National American Woman Suffrage Association and was a driving force behind the 19th amendment, which granted women the right to vote.
- The labor force of Sun Shipbuilding, which honors the 35,000 workers in Chester who built 40% of the U.S. tanker fleet during World War II
- Dr. Martin Luther King, commemorating the time he spent at Crozer Theological Seminary in Upland and Cavalry Baptist Church from 1948 to 1951.

Silva ended by discussing Delco Volunteers, an online space for schools, nonprofits, and community groups to post volunteer opportunities all in one place. This extends beyond America250PA Delco events and will increase civic engagement in Delaware County for years to come.

Council Vice Chair and America250PA Delco Commissioner Christine Reuther lauded the Delco Volunteers initiative, saying “I think that America250PA Delco can leave a terrific legacy not just for how we celebrate, but how we are as a county because one of the great strengths of Delaware County is its sense of community.”

Delaware County Council Names Chris Welsh as Interim Chief of Social Services and Community Programs

At Wednesday evening's Delaware County Council meeting, Chris Welsh was named the Interim Chief of Delaware County Social Services and Community Programs after being approved unanimously by Council.

Welsh brings a wealth of experience, including the last five and a half years as the Chief Public Defender for Delaware County. In this position, he reduced the daily prison population at George W. Hill Correctional Facility by nearly 40% or roughly 700 people per day. He also uncovered allegations of abuse in the county Juvenile Detention Center, leading to the closure of the facility in 2021. Welsh also transformed the staff in the Public Defender's office, increasing the diversity of the office and hiring more social workers.

"I'm looking forward to seeing what Mr. Welsh can do to bring some of the same expanded scope of mission to the various social services organizations," said Delaware County Council Vice Chair Christine Reuther. "I really appreciate his willingness to take on this role because I recognize it's a stretch going from running something that you know and that you've been doing for most of your career."

Before starting at the County, Welsh was the Executive Director of the Center for Ethics and the Rule of Law at the University of Pennsylvania Law School. He also spent 10+ years at the Defenders' Association of Philadelphia, where he worked his way up to Deputy Defender of Operations and System Development. He has an undergraduate degree from St. Joseph's and a law degree from Temple.

Throughout his career, he's worked on major trials, municipal court, juvenile defense, mental health, domestic violence, and more, making him uniquely qualified for this role.

Welsh has deep Delco ties, with his mother growing up in Sharon Hill and attending Archbishop Prendergast and his father growing up in Springfield and attending Cardinal O'Hara. He lives in Havertown with his wife and two daughters.

Welsh will look to optimize the operations of the Delaware County Department of Human Services, which includes Fair Acres Geriatric Center, Housing & Community Development, Libraries, Medical Examiner, Substance Abuse and Recovery, Veterans Affairs, and Workforce Development.

Welsh will be replacing Sandy Garrison, who will be the new Chief of Grants Compliance Administration, a role created under the recommendation of the Budget Task Force to enhance revenue.

On Wednesday night, Taylor Dunn was unanimously named the Interim Public Defender to fill Welsh's old position. Dunn, who was previously the County's Deputy Public Defender, has spent over 15 years in the office and has trained more than 30 new attorneys in that time.
